CIR 56006

There has been brought to my attention the annotation in pencil on the foot of the notification of the desire to renew of January 11, 1937, of the words "too late." That annotation does not, of course, express the opinion of this office; but having been inscribed on the document which constitutes for legal purposes the application for renewal in this case, it may be well to make of record the fact that the notification was not received too late.

Section 4953 of the Revised Statutes, which is the law applicable to this case for the purpose of determining a question of the duration of the copyright originally acquired, specifically provides that "copyrights shall be granted for the term of 28 years from the time of recording the title thereof in the manner hereinafter directed." Section 4957 specifically provides that manner.

The letter of January 11, 1937, was notification to this office of the desire to renew a specific work and identify the author. The copyright law does not prescribe any specific form in which such notification shall be communicated to the Copyright Office. The records of this office show that the "time of recording the title" of this work was January 12, 1909.
